ST. MARTIN'S LANE.

EIGHT years having passed, obviously it had become necessary that a new edition of the "Landed Gentry of Ireland" should be issued, in order that the genealogical records of the various families appearing in the book might be revised to date, and the happenings of birth, marriage and death, in the interval, be added to the pedigrees. But one is now confronted with the problem whether there still remains a Landed Gentry at all in that country, so great has been the compulsory alienation of land in Ireland during the last decade.

Whatever may be the decision as to future editions, in the present one there has been no violent disqualification of families because the broad acres of their estates have been contracted to the lands about the mansion house; in fact, but very few pedigrees have been removed. Although the fascination of the ownership of land—land hunger—is still a dominant characteristic of the British race, it cannot be said to possess its ancient importance; and the interest of the public, it seems to me, lies in the families themselves rather than in the extent of their ownership of land. The growth of the new landless plutocracy has shifted the importance of things, and is a factor that must weigh in the future, and be considered in conjunction with absenteeism. But the problem is for the next edition.

Although a number of new and interesting pedigrees are now included in "Burke" for the first time the changes in the present volume are chiefly caused by the revision of pedigrees and the occurrences of the interval. The latter have been exceedingly numerous, and I am chiefly indebted to the very many members of the families concerned with whom I have been in correspondence or to whom I have submitted proofs, for an enormous amount of assistance generously given to me. For that my grateful thanks.

In the revision of the pedigrees there will be found a number of important alterations. Some of my most vehement correspondents seem to fancy that "Burke" is edited by Hans Andersen. That really is quite a mistake. Of course, one knows that every Irishman is the descendant of countless kings, princes and other minor celebrities.

One admits it—the thing is unquestionable. One knows, of course, also, that every family is the oldest in Co. Galway, or Co. Sligo, or somewhere else, and that, for some reason or other, every Irishman is the “head” of his family, and I am growing weary of reading letters which assure me that the mushroom families included in the Landed Gentry pale into insignificance beside the glories of those which are omitted, and I am slowly learning—so often am I so assured—that all the pedigrees herein are hopelessly wrong. But although I may not have included quite so much as has been desired, I think I may claim that what is inserted may be relied upon. All genealogical works started upon a model of narrative, in which a place might properly be found for supposition and tradition. There has been a gradual transition to exactitude of fact, which is the aim in view, and which I claim has now been reached.

For the present edition every coat-of-arms has been carefully scrutinized and compared with the original records in Ulster's Office. I believe I can now claim for the Irish volume that, apart from unintentional error, every single one which is quoted herein can be relied upon as borne by unquestionable right. Families to whom no armorial bearings are assigned have none recorded to them in Ulster's Office.

The publishers have consented to incur the expense of bringing the Landed Gentry into line with the PEERAGE and BARONETAGE by illustrating every coat-of-arms in the book. This must add very greatly to its interest, and I trust their lavish expenditure on this point will receive the reward it merits in the increased appreciation of the public.

I am indebted to Mr. Farnham Burke, C.V.O., C.B., Norroy King of Arms, for much assistance in the preparation of this edition, and I have profited greatly from the kind help and from the labours of Mr. Ashworth Burke, who has resigned the editorship of the present edition, whilst many others have taken much trouble with the single-minded desire for the improvement or the accuracy of the volume. To all I tender my thanks, but above all I am under a deep debt of gratitude to Mr. G. D. Burtchaell, Athlone Pursuivant. His able and willing assistance have been acknowledged in former editions, but on the present occasion I have had the advantage of his help to an extent little short of a scrutiny of every line in the book. He it is who has examined the arms, and has gone to endless trouble to solve doubts and difficulties as they have become apparent in the pedigrees. I really think his name should be on the title page as editor. Mere words of thanks seem a feeble acknowledgment of what this edition owes to his untiring assistance.

Lineage.—The ARTHURS are stated to have been originally "Artureighs," and to derive their descent from a common ancestor with the O'Briens, viz., Cormac Cas, King of Munster. The name, it is further asserted, was anglicised, in connexion with the invasion of Ireland by Henry II, who is stated to have conferred honours and grants of land on one of that name in 1178. In the records of Limerick, the name of ARTHUR frequently occurs from the earliest period down to the time of CHARLES I, when the family estates in the county of Limerick were confiscated by OLIVER CROMWELL for loyalty to the royal cause. The ARTHURS then removed to the co. Clare, and became seated at Glanomera. On the municipal role of the city of Limerick are given the names of no less than 48 ARTHURS as Mayors, &c., of that city. From John Arthur, who was Mayor of Limerick in 1340, and Sir Dominick Arthur, also Mayor of the city, we pass to Sir Nicholas Arthur, Knt., Mayor in 1591, who also represented the city in Parliament. Thomas Arthur was Bishop of Limerick in 1470, and Richard Arthur was Roman Catholic Bishop in 1643. Rev. Geoffrey Arthur, of the Church of Rome, Treasurer of the cathedral of Limerick, d. 1570, and was buried there, where his monument, with a curious Latin inscription, may still be seen. * Major Brooke, as the representative of the Grahams, formerly of Rahin, Queen's Co., who were a branch of the Netherby family, is in possession of a massive old ring (stated to have been a royal gift) worn by his lineal ancestor, Sir Richard Grame, and commemorative of an act of extraordinary chivalry at the fight of Aherlow, A.D. 1600. Here it was that Capt. Richard Grame, commanding a band of sixty horse, attacked and "rowed" the whole forces of the Sagan Earl of Desmond, consisting of 600 soldiers. In his third charge Grame penetrated to their camp, seizing their carriages, standards, &c.; but in his fourth assault he charged so desperately that he "scattered their whole battalions," and that with such effect that Stafford says the Earl's forces were utterly broken and he was brought to a desperate "fortune," and never again could rally to a head, "but gat him into Ulster."—See Pacata Hibernia, pp. 149, 150.

COLHOUN OF CARRICKBALDOEY.

LIEUT.-COL. CHARLES KING COLHOUN, of Carrickbaldoe, co. Donegal, late Maj. (84th) York and Lancaster Regt., b. 12 Oct. 1858; m. 11 Oct. 1900, Flora, eldest dau. of Col. E. P. Mainwaring, Indian Army, by Florentia Ann, his wife, eldest dau. of Brig.-Gen. F. Brind, C.B., Bengal Horse Artillery, and has issue, a son, b. 3 Nov. 1909.

Lineage.—The Laird of Luss (Alexander Colquhoun) on the Plantation of Ulster had a grant in the co. of Donegal of 1,000 acres called Corkagh. He appears to have been accompanied to Ireland by several members of his clan. He was made a denizen of Ireland by the name of Sir Alexander Colquhoun, of Corkagh, in the co. Donegal, Knt. by Patent, dated 20 May 15 Jac I, which also includes the name of Daniel Colquhoun of Corkie, co. Donegal. In the same year the Laird of Luss was succeeded by his son, Sir John Colquhoun of Luss, created a baronet in 1625. By Patent dated 14 July, 1630, another member of the family, Robert Colquhoun (probably Robert Colquhoun, afterwards of Camstradden) was granted letters of denization together with Corkagh, which was then created the Manor of Corkagh, with the usual manorial rights. Part of the lands were subsequently acquired by Humphrey and Robert Galbraith, who by deed dated 1 May, 1654, conveyed, among other denominations of land, the quarter of Corkagh and Lebinish, and the town and lands of Carrickballyduff, alias Carrickballyduff to Sir John Colhoun, Junior, Knt. and Bart. (of Luss). The last-mentioned lands have been for over a century in the possession of the King family, ancestors of the present Colhoun family, who would appear to descend from some of the junior branches who settled in Ireland.

"Ce mariage fut célébré à Follenbourg château royal entre Chauny et Coucy, le 17 Déc. 1595, honoré de la présence de Madame Catherine de France, sœur du roi HENRI IV, qui y tenoit sa cœur." Antrim, bringing with them a number of tradesmen and a capital of £20,000 with which they established the linen manufacture, which was adopted by the natives, and has flourished ever since. In consideration of Louis having spent £10,000 on its establishment, KING WILLIAM, who was much interested in its success, conferred on him a pension of £200 a year for the life of his son, on whose early death, it was discontinued. DE LA CHEROIS OF DONAGHADEE.

GEORGE LESLIE DE LA CHEROIS, of the Manor House, Donaghadee, co. Down, b. 1866.

Lineage.—The family of De la Cherois descends from the younger branch of an ancient and noble house in France, formerly resident at Cheroi or Cherois, a small town near Sens, in the province of Champagne, whence the family name is derived.

The Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, in the year 1685, compelled the De la Cherois, being Protestants, to leave their native country. In the year 1641,

CAPT. SAMUEL DE LA CHEROIS (ancestor of the family settled in Ireland) served in the war undertaken by Cardinal Richelieu against the House of Austria. He left three sons,

1. NICHOLAS, of whom presently.

2. Daniel, Capt., fled to Holland with his brothers, 1685, and was afterwards Capt. in William's Army.

3. Bourjonval, Lieut. in the Army, killed at Dungannon, d. unm.

The eldest son,

NICHOLAS DE LA CHEROIS, embraced the military profession and was made a Capt. of Fusiliers by Louis XIV, 1677. In the year 1685 he fled with his brothers to Holland, where they were received with great kindness by the Statesholder, into whose service they entered, obtaining commissions in the Dutch Army of the same rank as those they had held in that of France. In 1689, WILLIAM, Prince of Orange, being called to the throne of Great Britain, formed several regiments of French Huguenots, in one of which Nicholas de la Cherois was appointed Major, Daniel, Captain, and Bourjonval, Lieutenant. They accompanied King WILLIAM to Ireland 1690, and finally settled there. Major de la Cherois distinguished himself at the battle of the Boyne, and afterwards performed a very gallant action, making fifteen hundred men lay down their arms with only a subaltern's guard, for which he was presented by the Government with fifteen hundred crowns and a Lieutenant-Colonelcy. Lineage.—This is an ancient Irish sept, whose chieftains formerly ruled over Hy-Regain, a territory comprised in the present Queen's Co. They were of the same race as O'Connor Faighe, O'More, and O'Dempsey, and Irish genealogists derived their descent from Cathair Mor, Monarch of Ireland.

RORY O'DOINN, Chief of Hy-Regain, d. according to the Annals of the Four Masters, A.D. 1427. The descent of the various branches of this sept, O'DUINNE, DOYNE, and DUNNE, was preserved in a pedigree deposited in the library of St. Isidore, Rome, by a member of the family who was a clergyman of the Church of Rome, in the early part of the 17th century, which is now among the Archives of the Franciscan Convent, Merchant's Quay, Dublin. The son of this chieftain,

4. Cahir or Charles, Master in Chancery, M.P. Trinity Coll. Dublin, got a grant of the greater portion of the Hy-Regain estate, by a fiat dated 29 June, 6 JAMES I, 1608, and d. unm., having bequeathed all his estates, by will dated 2 April, 1617, to his nephew, Brian Oge O'Duinn or Dunn, son of his brother Barnaby. O'Duinn made a settlement of his estates on his sons, with remainders to the descendants of his brothers Terence and Owen, by three several deeds, dated 20 July, 1590, 17 April, 1591, and 28 April, 1593. He was a very old man and blind in 1593, and was s. by his eldest son,

According to the registered pedigrees, Thomas, great-grandson of the above mentioned Thomas FitzGerald, or O'Dea, sat in the Parliament held before Thomas, Earl of Desmond, in 1465. Thomas, said to be his son, was member of the Parliament held at Trim, before Gerald, Earl of Kildare, in 1490. "Thomas O'Dea, of Gurtyns, co. Kilkenny, Gent.," was pardoned 6 July, 1549.
